

INSTRUCCIONES:

El examen contiene un bloque con preguntas sobre un texto, otro bloque de preguntas de gramática y un tercer bloque con ejercicios de expresión escrita:

Bloque 1.-READING COMPREHENSION- El estudiante elegirá SOLO UNO de los textos propuestos, y contestará a todas las preguntas formuladas.

Bloque 2.-USE OF ENGLISH- El estudiante elegirá CUATRO ORACIONES de entre las OCHO propuestas en este bloque. Todas las oraciones tienen la misma puntuación.

Bloque 3.- WRITING- El estudiante elegirá y desarrollará SOLO UNO de los ejercicios de expresión escrita, de entre los propuestos en este bloque. Todos los ejercicios tienen la misma puntuación.

2. Si se contestan a más preguntas de las indicadas para cada bloque, el exceso no se corregirá.

PART 1.-READING COMPREHENSION

CHOOSE TEXT A OR TEXT B AND ANSWER THE QUESTIONS 1A-3A OR 1B-3B (5 POINTS)

Text A- Climate Change Solutions

The Earth is getting warmer, and if the trend continues, humans may have some serious problems. Most of us are aware of the need for recycling and driving less, but what other ideas are the experts considering?

Man-made trees? According to climate experts, one big problem we have right now is too much CO₂ in the air. If we can put CO₂ into the air, can we take it back out? At the moment, trees do this job – just not fast enough. So, could we make tree-like machines to do the job? Scientist Klaus Lackner of Columbia University in New York says yes, and several companies are already developing the idea.

Smarter power for vehicles? Electric cars are more and more common all over the world, and the technology is getting better. And if you recharge their batteries with electricity which comes from solar and wind power, they turn into very clean technology. By law, the petrol sold in Brazil is 25% ethanol - a fuel made from sugar. It pollutes less than ordinary petrol. However, growing the sugar uses a lot of energy, and some people say the fuel can damage car engines. Hydrogen - a natural part of water - is used in some vehicles, including buses in cities around the world. It's a great fuel because the only waste it produces is water. The big problem is that making hydrogen fuel creates a lot of pollution.

Smoke to make shade? Smoke from volcanoes and forest fires is known to block the sun and cool the Earth. Scientists at the University of Bristol in the UK have done experiments to test the idea of creating smoke to cool the world. The idea is disliked by most experts as a possibly very dangerous way to fight climate change. Dr Hugh Hunt, director of the research projects, said that the technology won't be developed in the near future.

A vegetarian diet? According to a report by the United Nations, producing meat creates more greenhouse gas emissions than transport - 18% of the world's total. Eating less meat would help to reduce emissions and possibly fight global warming. Cities in Belgium, Brazil, Germany and South Africa - among many others – have 'no meat' days to bring the issue to people's attention, and to try to fight climate change close to home.

These are big ideas, but the solution in the end may be a big sum of small actions.

Text B- Generation Z: 'We have more to do than drink and take drugs.'

They drink less, take far fewer drugs, and have made teenage pregnancy a near anomaly. Generation Z – one of several terms used to describe post-millennial youth born after 1996 – prefer juice bars to pub crawls and give more importance to good grades than friendship, at least according to a report published by the British Pregnancy Advisory Service last week.

Headlines characterise today's youth as boring, sensible and extremely screen-addicted. So, are the kids all right?

"We have so much more to do than [just] drink and take drugs," says Demi Babalola, a 19-year-old philosophy and sociology student.

What's her biggest time stealer? "Social media." Babalola uses Snapchat, Twitter and Instagram, although she considers people silly at the mention of Facebook, full as it is of "older people".

"We listen to music, make our own food, and play games," she says. "We'll probably organise it a couple of days before."

Lewis Allely, 14, from Cornwall, agrees. "We're quite different [from your generation] because there's more stuff to do at each other's houses and we have more technology – like, we have video games."

The remark that many young people spend far too much time online, instead of rebelling, may have some truth, but as futurologist Rhiannon McGregor points out, Gen Z-ers are more cautious and risk-averse than their parents, partly because that technology exists.

"But they're also more socially aware since they see themselves as part of a global community. It's easier to get and feel connected to someone in Africa or Asia and share preoccupations about climate change, for instance."

Owen Munro adds: "My generation feels bitter about all the things we won't be able to do because of what the older generation chose."

"We're more inclusive," says Babalola. "You can do what you want as long as you don't harm anyone and stay safe. It's about freedom. Previous generations always made distinct separations between being gay or straight. "I try to avoid labels."

Generation Z-ers will, after all, be living longer and more healthily, and looking better for it. So, what is the new going out? The Generation Z idea of fun that is inexplicable to older adults? Owen Munro, Allely and Babalola instantly refer me to Snapchat, where they communicate constantly with their friends. Broadcasting the small details of her day – a good outfit, a trip to London – is as instinctive as breathing to Babalola.
